

A Washington, D.C. law firm anticipating future growth sought a flexible environment with a modern, understated look and state-of-the-art A/V systems in its conference rooms. The design vocabulary features rich, tactile materials that extend from the reception area into hallways, offices, and collaborative spaces.

Top: Reception center with quartered teak panels, polished chrome trim, white back painted glass case and white marble branding wall. Highline rectangular conference table, Calacatta white marble, polished chrome edge and open loop leg, table top technology and microphones.